

ABSTRACT

A digital still camera includes means for converting an optical image into a digital electromagnetic image signal, means for transmitting an electromagnetic to designate a remote device accessible in accordance with a wireless telephone system, means for receiving an electromagnetic signal containing an identification signal to be transmitted back from the remote device in response to the designation, means for modifying the electromagnetic signal into a digital electronic signal, means responsive to the receiving means for reducing the number of pixels of the still image, and means for transmitting the electromagnetic signal containing the still image signal to the designated remote device.

09026336-024998